Think Thankfully

CONGRESSMAN SAM RAYBURN of Texas had a favorite anecdote, and he told it often during the many years he was speaker of the house of representatives. One of his constituents, the story goes, was expressing some dissatisfaction with his congressman. He wondered why nothing was being done for the benefit of the voters in his district.

Astonished that anyone would feel this way, the congressman reminded him of several notable accomplishments. There was a new post office in his city. There was a new courthouse in the county seat, a generous subsidy for the farmers, and some dramatic benefits for the schools in the area. During the congressman's term there had been a huge appropriation for a new dam, and a long list of projects which brought benefits to the voters in the district.

"I know all that," was the voter's response. "But what have you done for us lately?"

This story, we suppose, should arouse pity for the politician, if such short-lived gratitude is characteristic of all voters. But there is more of a moral here than the fickleness of the human mind which can forget so easily the benefits it has accepted so casually. There is portrayed here an attitude which should be recognized and shunned by Christians. It is the mental habit of dwelling upon the negative while overlooking the positive. It is the tendency to focus always upon what is wrong, seldom if ever upon what is right. Thoughts continually turn to discontent, and faultfinding becomes much easier than thanksgiving.

The Israelites demonstrated this attitude when they murmured in the wilderness. Turning their thoughts away from the manna from heaven, which tasted like wafers made with honey, they longed for the leeks and garlic of Egypt, which tasted like something else. It seemed easier for them to appreciate the oppression of Pharaoh than the leadership of Moses. The habit seems to have been "Think critically," when it should have been "Think thankfully"!

Some would argue that, if there could be more of the good things of life, there would then follow more of a sense of appreciation. But it does not always work that way. Rather, the opposite too often is true; the more benefits received, the less gratitude expressed.

Consider the case of the 10 men who met Jesus one day, and walked away with the most precious gift of a lifetime—an incurable disease completely healed and good health restored. One came back to express his gratitude. What happened to the other 9?

Walking through a narrow, dusty street in a Mozambique village, the editor saw a Bantu boy playing with a homemade toy. He had put it together with pieces of wire he had found, and it looked like a miniature automobile. It rolled along on its wheels; it turned corners, it stopped and started; and he found it delightful. One could not escape the contrast of this sight with that of boys whose more affluent circumstances provide them with rooms filled with multicolored, shiny space-age playthings, among which they fret in bored frustration. Possessing more things and receiving more blessings does not always result in thinking more thankfully.

To be sure, a noble discontent can be used of God to bring about needed change. God would not be pleased if His people went about pretending everything is wonderful, smiling foolishly when there is nothing to smile about, and being out of tune with reality. There comes a time when wrongs must be recognized, and made right. But the problem is compounded when nothing but wrong is ever recognized. The ability to point out faults, call attention to weaknesses, and emphasize failures can become a habit. Letting the mind dwell upon “whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report” (Phil. 4:8) becomes more difficult and less likely. Woefully diminished is the ability to think thankfully.

Negative thoughts are destructive when they are frequently or continually applied to the self, and a person’s feelings become fixed in the thought, I am a failure. No matter that he is not a failure in every way, or at all times. His mind dwells on failure, and he permits this to mean “always a failure, in all things a failure, in every way a failure, and forever a failure”! Ignored is the truth that he is God’s workmanship, and that God loves him.

What a difference it makes when members of the body of Christ remember to practice the principle of thinking thankfully! Minimized is the tendency to look for the mistakes of other members, point out the failures of a pastor, or call attention to whatever faults there may be in denominational structures. Instead there is gratitude. Gratitude for forgiveness, and for the privilege of learning to extend it to others. There is gratitude for grace, and for the fact that it is undeserved, and has no limits. There is gratitude for cleansing wrought in the heart by the Holy Spirit. The Comforter has indeed come, and He abides. Jesus Christ is risen, and is alive forevermore. The Lord God omnipotent reigneth!

Our best Example, the Master himself, set the pattern. Just a few hours before Calvary, “He took the cup, and gave thanks . . .”

By His help, let us also take it, and think thankfully.

The hours that the Son spent with the Father in prayer were absolutely necessary if He was to fulfill His earthly task

Christ's Prayer Life— A Luxury or a Necessity?

IN INTERROGATING audiences as to why Christ made a large place in His busy and useful life to be alone with the Father, I have received varied and interesting answers. One of them has intrigued me, for it has in it what must be a very truthful and wonderful element. Yet if accepted as the final—and even the main—answer, it carries with it the eroding element that would undermine our prayer life, and make of Him an empty Example of prayer for us. In fact, it sets a pattern for us that is meaningless, and removes the power of His prayer life as an example for us to emulate.

The answer is “Christ had a long, preincarnate relationship with the Father, and it was a real luxury for Him to have long vigils with One with whom He was so well acquainted.” That there is truth in this statement one cannot deny. But if there were no other reason for His praying, He left no pattern for us.

Prayer for Christ was a necessity. He needed resources that He could get only from His Father—resources that He did not possess. Yet they were indispensable if He was to carry out the Father's will, and that was His avowed purpose. Even a cursory review of Christ's statements concerning himself reveals His confessed dependence upon the Father. A few such statements will illustrate:

“The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do” (John 5:19).

“I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things” (John 8:28).

“I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him” (John 8:26).

“As I hear, I judge” (John 5:30).

There are many more scriptures which show Christ's utter dependence upon the Father. He lived a life of faith in His Father while on earth. He had made his dependence upon the Father so clear, and His faith in Him so complete, that when He was in the agony of death and cried out, “Eloi, Eloi, lama sabach tha ni?” some of the bystanders, remembering that He had claimed that He trusted in God, said, “Let us see whether Elias will come to take him down” (Mark 15:36).

It is said of Him that He knew what He would do. He did. And why did

by
T. W. Willingham

He know? He had been taught of God. "My Father hath taught me," or some such statements, were often upon His lips. His acts were limited to what He saw His Father do. He originated no business. His purpose, as well as His pursuit, was the execution of His Father's will, and He did it so perfectly that He could say, "I do always those things that please him" (John 8:29).

The very fact that He was taught of the Father explains much of the time that He spent in the mountains alone with the Father. It takes time to be taught, and what wonderful revelations He gave us from the Father! Too often we think of them as the matchless words of the Son. This He flatly denied. He took no credit for what He said. Neither the profound teachings of the Sermon on the Mount nor the graphic descriptions of the horrors of the last days, nor even the grandeur of His parables, came from Him. He declared with no uncertainty, "The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself" (John 14:10). "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak" (John 12:49). We could multiply such statements, but these are enough. He had to learn all that He was to say.

Some think that Jesus came to earth with all of His work known to Him. That was not the case. He "learned," and that takes time. He said that He could do nothing except "what he seeth the Father do." Lest someone cling to the false belief that this "seeing" was in ages past, he needs to read John 5:20. Jesus had been doing some things that He had seen His Father do, and the disciples were amazed. He then remarked, "He will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel." Note the "will shew." He hadn't seen the Father do them as yet, but evidently the Father had told Him in an earlier class period that He had greater things in store for Him to perform, and would tell Him in a following session.

Christ must have gone to His classes with high enthusiasm and expectation. He had already turned water into wine, purged the Temple, healed the impotent man at Bethesda's pool. The whole countryside was dumbfounded at His words and deeds. Then He told them that more and greater things were in store, although He did not as yet know just what they were. He must have been happy when His last weary disciple turned in for the night, so He could steal away for the refresher course in the mountains.

He needed strength, for He said, "I can of mine own self do nothing." The Bible does not paint a picture of an all-sufficient Christ, drawing upon His own resources for His words of wisdom and His acts of power. "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings" (Heb. 2:10). He must develop, and that took time and study. His schooling in the classroom of His Father and that in "the university of hard knocks" were both necessary to make Him perfect. We know that He took these paths, and we know that He made it, for we have the record: "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him" (Heb. 5:9).

Without a doubt, the hours that the Son spent with the Father—and they were many—were a delight; but they were not a luxury—a thing unnecessary. They were necessary and absolutely indispensable if He was to fulfill His earthly task. He knew not what course to take, what miracle to perform, what message to deliver, at whose house He was to dine, what answers He was to give to the questioning lawyers. In short, He could do nothing of himself. He must have the wisdom and the enabling power of the Father—hence His prayer life.

Oh, to feel the need of God as He felt it, and to seek it and find it as He did! He is our perfect Example. Dare we follow Him? Dare we not? To do so is to live. To fail is to fall short.

So You Are Going to Build?

By Kenneth Burton*

SEVERAL THINGS must be determined before entering into a building program.

First, one must decide about his own ability to do the job. To build, to lead people in a building program, or to supervise contractors, requires a lot of energy and know-how. Can you be on the job at 7 a.m. every day and stay until 5 p.m.? Much of the time you will not be able to get away for even a snack; or if you do get a break, you must visit someone who has a problem—for your ministry also must be served.

Can you return to the job in the evening, and work with your men who are employed during the day, but want to share in the building program? Can you keep this up for six months, or whatever time it takes, and not go to pieces? When day is done, everyone is gone, and you are alone, exhausted, hungry, and discouraged because you didn't get as much help as you had hoped for, can you still lay out in your mind the work for tomorrow, so as not to waste precious hours in the morning?

Can your wife take it? My wife is a patient woman. She has made it with me for 32 years, so you know she is patient. For six months now we have kept house in the pastor's study, cooked in the church kitchen, and bathed at the Sunday school superintendent's house. She works so as to keep her sanity and so that we will have more money to put into the work, for we feel that we must set the pace in giving as well as in labors.

While we are here at this retreat, she is home working her shift, then rushes home to paint on that new parsonage. We work it together; yet at times my patient wife says, "You are married to the church and not to me." A less enduring and understanding wife would indicate that you had better stay away from church building, for it takes a dedication akin to the marriage relationship if you are to get the job done.

*Pastor, Church of the Nazarene, Helena, Mont. (This paper was presented to the pastors' and wives' retreat for the Rocky Mountain District, and submitted by Ross E. Price, superintendent.)

Second, can you buy and sell with wisdom? Please pardon these personal examples, but these we are familiar with, and so share them to God's glory. In Libby, Mont., one of the trustees said we would be fortunate if we could get $6,500 out of our old property—and he had some basis for his reasoning. We sold it for more than $18,000.

In Helena, our old church wasn't much, yet it sold for $35,000. The parsonage was a building of less than 900 square feet, and we sold it for $21,000—which was $6,000 more than most hoped for. In Libby, the seller asked $6,000 for our building site. We gave him $5,000, and a donation receipt for the balance. In Helena, we dickered with the realtor until we purchased a sizable piece of land at a good price.

Third, can you talk to a contractor and make him a counterproposal? Can you go to a tradesman with a list of your needs and ask him for his best bid? Can you make do with what you have? Libby's building, with an insurance value of nearly $200,000, was up and in use before we financed it. We went to the suppliers and told them what we were doing and when we would have money, and they worked with us.

One hardfisted businessman advanced us a large amount of material. When I took him his check, I told him I felt it would be a fair trade if he would give me one. I came away with a $50.00 donation, and was told I was the first person to ever get a nickel from him. Such was our relationship that, when his wife announced that she planned to change churches, he told her she was to go nowhere until she had tried our church. I not only had his goodwill, his $50.00, but I received his wife into the church membership.

In Montana's capital city, we bought our site and built our educational unit from the proceeds of our old church building. We would have erected our parsonage out of the proceeds of the sale of the old parsonage, but we still owed $5,500 on it, and we spent another $10,000 for a house in which our assistant pastor lives. So we will finish our new parsonage with only a $10,000 debt on a building that is appraised at $52,000. Last week I deposited a check for $40,000 of borrowed money. If I guard it carefully, it should complete our sanctuary, which is scheduled for next spring.

Fourth, can you preach on tithing and thus develop responsible stewardship among your people? Some pastors tremble at the thought of preaching on tithing. One man said, "I never preach it. That is something people have to decide for themselves." Granted it is, but are not also one's salvation and sanctification?

I have a family in my church to whom I've preached stewardship for two years, yet I have been unable to involve them in the church. Two weeks ago, after I had preached a message on tithing, the husband came to me after the evening service (which they seldom attend) and said, "After that message this morning we have decided that we must start doing things differently." And they have!

In Libby, the total giving for all purposes upon our arrival was only $7,800 per year. When I left three and one-half years later, it was $21,000, and it continues to increase. Helena's income has been $12,000 to $15,000 per year for some time. This week our treasurer deposited $1,052 as a single week's income.

Finally, why should one build? What is the need? This is another item that must be determined. Am I seeking to build a monument to myself? This is not sufficient reason for building—nor does it always work that way. Often when the monument is completed, you too have completed your task in that city, and move to a new field.

The only valid reason for building is the need for new and larger facilities. Has the old proven insufficient and unsatisfactory—either for worship or for education? Is parking a problem? Is traffic and noise a difficulty? Is the building in such a state of disrepair that it would be better business financially to start anew? Then by all means build!

But what should I build? Where should I build? In this day of auto transportation, it is usually best to get out where you can buy enough land to accommodate your building, parking, and expansion. On some districts there may be a need in large cities for the downtown church. How big should I build? How big is your faith? As we built in Libby, a neighbor asked, “Do you have enough people to fill this building?” “No,” I replied, “else I would have built it larger.”

Some Helpful Hints

If I am going to do the building, I must visualize the building in my mind as the first step. I take pencil and paper, and I sketch, draw, erase, drawn again, crumple, and start all over. It will take a few hours—perhaps a few weeks—before I come up with what I want. Then I go to my board for their suggestions. More drawing and erasing to incorporate their desires into the plan. Then back again to the board. If they like it, I go next to a draftsman for scaled drawings, preliminary in detail. These I take to the district board of church extension. They will suggest some changes, but hopefully they will approve. Brethren, you can get yourself into trouble if you bypass this board. Their purpose is to help you get the very best construction for your building dollar. Having secured their approval, go back for final drawings, and then reproductions which go to contractors for bidding purposes. Then you are ready to go to work.

Your building committee should be small. Arrange for positive-thinking people to serve on this committee. Consult them often.

A word should be said about the “pastor-contractor.” Should the pastor donate this extra time, or should he be paid at least a token wage? There is no more appreciation of your labors if they are donated than if they are paid for. In most instances there is a greater respect for your leadership and judgment if it comes with some expense to the church. I do not have a breakdown between my salary as pastor and my wage as builder in the Helena project, but they are being generous with me, and this works to their advantage. They will come to the end of their building program with nearly $200,000 worth of property at a cost far less—so whatever they pay me, they are still saving greatly on costs.

Recently in Helena we have achieved the best arrangement I have ever had in a building program. The church hired—from the building funds—an assistant pastor. He helps both in the labor of building and in the preaching and pastoral ministry of the church. What a relief it has been in these past three months to have him with us! I am not working alone, and this saves hours of discouragement. The work of the ministry continues.

To sum it all up, if you have an aptitude for building, if you have a real need to build, then God will give you the grace and strength to get the job done, and just possibly He will give you a people with enough grace to put up with you while you are doing it.

God's Promise of Blessing

Two pastors present their use, and God's blessing, of reading this inspired Book aloud to their congregations.

by
Earl G. Lee

Pastor
First Church of the Nazarene
Pasadena, Calif.

This has been a year of obedience for us—and also a year of miracles.

One of the steps of obedience we took this year was one that was hard to understand. One day as I was reading alone in my “quiet time,” the words of Rev. 1:3 (TLB) just stood out and demanded attention. This always means “listen” and “do.” The words were so clear as I read: “If you read this prophecy aloud to the church, you will receive a special blessing from the Lord. Those who listen to it being read and do what it says will also be blessed. For the time is near when these things will all come true.”*

I had never heard of this being done before, but there is no more obvious promise in God's Word to the Church than this one in verse 3.

**The Living Bible*, copyright © 1971, Tyndale House Publishers, Wheaton, Ill. Used by permission.

I accepted the challenge and began reading aloud the Revelation from The Living Bible as a scripture reading each Sunday morning. We began on April 29. It was not an accident—nor was it preplanned—that the last chapter was read on the closing Sunday of December. We took more than the 22 weeks to complete it.

Some of the most unusual and unexplainable things have happened since the time I began reading. It has been a tremendous experience in my own life, as I read chapter after chapter aloud to the church.

The climax came on that last Sunday of the year when the entire service was given to a review of the blessings and miracles that had happened in the lives of our people. I selected several of the outstanding “miracles” to share their testimonies as I interviewed them.

There were reborn individuals who had been on prayer lists for many years. Couples shared how God had healed their broken homes—homes that a year ago had been on the rocks, but were now on the Rock. We had a great service of praise for healed lives, healed homes, and healed bodies.

Yes, this has been a year of blessing and miracles in our church.

by
Mark E. Moore

Pastor
Church of the Nazarene
Piqua, Ohio

I knew the promise was there. A promise of blessing. A blessing for the Church. Twenty-five years of pastoring, and I had bypassed it. I had never really believed it was a promise for our church today.

Would I be foolish to claim this promise of blessing? This forgotten promise of blessing. "If you read this prophecy aloud to the church, you will receive a special blessing from the Lord. Those who listen to it being read and do what it says will also be blessed. For the time is near when these things will all come true" (Rev. 1:3, TLB).*

Why not? If God promised a blessing to the church, I decided to believe it.

I divided Revelation to fit an eight-week period, requiring from six to eight minutes for each reading. I selected two of the best readers in the church (a man and a lady) for each Sunday's reading. Each portion was broken down into natural divisions: A read the letter to the first of the seven churches, B the next, and so on. The scripture fit into a beautiful reading plan. Its division is almost automatic. Our reading was from The Living Bible.

Did we receive a blessing? Yes! I was amazed at how attentively the people listened to the Bible reading. It was common for "amens" to be heard at the conclusion of each reading. It was read without comments or interpretation. The Word spoke for itself and God honored it. At the conclusion of the last reading, the chapters of heaven, the choir broke into singing "What a Day That Will Be," and the warmth of God's presence climaxed the reading.

I am glad I claimed the forgotten promise, for God kept His promise to the church.

The eight-week plan I used, including the scripture readings, sermon titles, and texts, is as follows:

1. Revelation 1—2. A Sunday Morning Message to the Church. Text 1:10-11.
2. Revelation 3—5. The Future as Seen from Heaven's Door. Text: 4:1-2.
3. Rev. 6:1—8:5. The Unsealed Seals. Text: 6:1.
4. Rev. 8:6—11:19. Trumpets of Tragedy. Text: 8:13.
5. Revelation 12—14. The Pageant of Prophecy—Act I. Text: 12:1.
6. Revelation 15—17. The Pageant of Prophecy—Act II. Text: 15:1.
7. Revelation 18—19. The Wrong Shall Fail, the Right Prevail. Text: 19:6, 20.
8. Revelation 20—22. The City, the Saviour, the Saints. Text: 21:1, 5, 7.

The greatest attraction in the Church is the Holy Spirit's presence. While the world totters on the brink of destruction, the Church needs His power more than ever.

The Cutting Edge

By Morris Chalfant*

PETER'S PENTECOSTAL SERMON in Jerusalem, as recorded in Acts 2, was one of the most effective sermons ever preached, "And the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." The Apostolic Church was a cutting edge in its cultural and social environment.

The difficulty with our situation today is that all too frequently we are not the cutting edge—we are just edgy. If you look these two words up in the dictionary, you will find the following:

Edge: sharpness, hence penetrating power

Edgy: eager, impatient, anxious, irritable

Peter's message had penetrating power.

"Blow the trumpet in Zion." Nobody uses a trumpet to put the baby to sleep. Trumpets are for waking people up. Trumpets in Zion are to arouse the Church to her mission. There is always some measure of suddenness about divine judgments. God's warnings precede them.

Paul was using a trumpet when he wrote to the Romans "that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light" (13:11-12). Our situation calls for repentance and rededication to God. If we have reached the "stomach-turning" point, we must now reach the "heart-turning" point.

Repentance involves self-dethronement, and men do not abdicate because they are pleased or tickled by a brilliant performance in the pulpit. Soft preaching is so far from uprooting the "green bay tree," spreading itself in pride, that it only sways the branches in its caressing breeze, and encourages the deeper rooting of self-sufficiency. True evangelism has a message that searches and shakes men's souls until they break in a contrition far deeper than mere regret.

Away with the baby prattle in the pulpits! Will tales by the talented Shakespeare bring men and women to the foot of the Cross? Will brain-tling lectures about the sun, moon, and stars, about science, technology, industry, and outer space, bring about a soul-saving revival? Will lukewarm, shallow, prayerless, tearless, soft-soaping, sin-covering, mushy sermons move America to God and shake the foundations of hell? Will turning over a new leaf, doing nice things for your fellowmen, and reform bring revival? Will even adding new property and gigantic edifices to the general church? Will adding worldly new members to our church rolls be the means of saving the souls of the lost, and sanctifying the souls of believers? God knows, and you and I know, that none of these produces earthshaking revivals. At times we try to tell ourselves that they do, but deep in our hearts we know they are not the answer.

Over the years our numbers have increased, our church buildings are more imposing, our missionary program is outstanding, our schools are recognized; but do we still have the soul travail which caused preachers and laymen to weep over the erring ones, to miss their meals, and have sleepless nights? Do we have more adoptions than we have births? Are we more dependent on the supper room than the Upper Room? Do we substitute organizing for agonizing?

The attraction of the past in our church was the Holy Spirit upon its people. While the world totters on the brink of destruction, this is no time to replace the power of the Holy Spirit with the influence of spectacular movies and personages of prestige. The glory of standing in the gap in days like these is a challenge to us. Will we hold the banner of holiness of heart and life, or will Ichabod have to be written over our doors?

How It Feels to Be Lonely

It feels pretty bad to be lonely. Like when your father, who is a preacher, gets called to another city. You have to go to a new school. The first day at school you just sit there feeling funny. They do things that are new to you, like maybe grading papers differently. You sit there while someone else figures your grade. Then you find out you have to ride the bus. You make a friend or two at the bus stop, but they're either not your age or they go to the Lutheran school. Then you find out there is a boy in your class that rides your bus, and another who lives down the street, and still another one who lives about three blocks away. They become your good friends and school is alright. Then a few months later you find out they are going to tear down the part of the school that you go to and you will be transferred to another school for about a month. You hardly know anybody at your school, much less at another school.

It is almost the same thing with Sunday school. Your dad is in charge of the churches on the Dakota District and has to go to a different church every Sunday. You're just getting used to one church when you go to another. You make a few friends at about every church but never really get to play with them. Well, I think I can hold out right now.

Concern for Souls

IN PSALM 142:4 we read, "I looked on my right hand, and beheld, but there was no man that would know me: refuge failed me; no man cared for my soul."

Originally, the pitiful words of the text were the wail of David while hiding from Saul in the cave Engedi, about 1061 B.C.

If David was a type of Christ, the text could well be applied to the Saviour on the Cross. It was written of Christ in Isa. 53:3, "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him." But verse 5 says, "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."

It would do no injustice to truth to apply the text to the condition and unexpressed attitude of multitudes of crushed souls in the darkness of sin's terrible night who wonder why more interest, more love, and more action are not manifested by the church for their salvation. "Why is the gospel chariot so long in coming?"

Gen. 2:7 says, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Man, with his immortal soul, made in the image of God and capable of fellowship with God, will never be satisfied with anything less than the Spirit of God in his heart. Wealth, fame, or high position will not satisfy the soul. Ps. 42:1 bears this out, "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God." Souls are hungry for God and looking for help. The text says, "I looked on my right hand, and beheld, but there was no man that would know me . . . no man cared for my soul."

In Luke 10:2, Jesus said, "The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest." Put the text and these words of Jesus together, and you have both the unsaved and the Lord himself waiting on the Church—waiting for Christians to act in behalf of dying humanity. Are we too busy with our jobs, reputations, and church programs to care?

B. Carradine confessed it this way:

*I was working in the Temple with my Saviour by my side,
Where the multitudes assembled with their misery and pride.
Glancing upward from my labors, I just caught His distant smile;
"You have placed your work between us—come and talk with Me awhile."*

As we commune with Christ, we imbibe His spirit and likeness. Paul said in Phil. 2:5, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." Luke 19:10 says, "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." The chief concern of Jesus has always been the salvation of souls. It is so stated in Titus

2:14, "... that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

The word Christian means Christ-like. Whatever the means and processes of our Christian activity, it must all be to the end that souls for whom Christ died might be saved. Any motive or goal other than the salvation of souls in our Christian program is a gross miscarriage of God's purpose for us.

According to the teachings of Christ in John 15, it is most imposunto us." We might try our best to be concerned for the lost, but the Holy Spirit must put the love and burden within us. Otherwise it is wasted effort—like tying artificial leaves on a growing tree. Many of us need to be anointed with fresh oil as indicated in Ps. 92:10.

For some examples of concern for souls, listen to Moses plead with God, "Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin—; and if not, blot me . . . out of thy book which thou hast written" (Exod. 32:32). David was concerned for his third son when he asked, "Is the young man Absalom safe?" (2 Sam. 18:32). Elisha was concerned when he said to his servant, Gehazi, about the Shunammite woman, "Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child?" (2 Kings 4:26). Andrew was concerned when "he first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ. And he brought him to Jesus" (John 1:41-42). Hear Paul say, "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh" (Rom. 9:3).

I was my mother's pastor at Abilene, Tex. She confided to me her great burden for my brother Paul, who was single and living in deep sin. She said, "Homer, I can't stand it any longer." I went to my study and prayed for Paul with real Holy Ghost burden and faith. God gave assurance he would be saved at once.

The altar was full that night, and my brother was among the seekers. Everyone prayed through except Paul. God whispered, "Go out to the house—he will make it yet." The car battery was frozen. My tired feet measured every foot of the three miles against a freezing blizzard. We went to the hayloft. Mother and my sible to remain Christian unless we are concerned for souls. "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." The last part of this second verse contains the secret to real concern for souls—complete purging and cleansing. "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you" (Acts 1:8).

It was Pentecost which girded the Early Church with soul-saving power to win 3,000 in a day. Luther was effective only after he was filled with the Spirit. It was the same with Wesley, Knox, Finney, Moody, the early church fathers of our holiness movement, and effective preachers of the present day.

Rom. 5:5 informs us that "the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given sister Gladys joined us. We prayed all night. At sunup Paul leaped to his feet with God's praises ringing from his lips like silver bells.

Let it never be said of us that somebody looked to us for spiritual help—and we failed to care for his soul.

Evangelism can nurture not only the growth of new Christians, but also the training of the average layman to help them grow.

Follow-up Evangelism

By Paul Lorenzen*

Part 4. Its Objectives

According to the director of follow-up of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, "Follow-up does not take time! It takes your life!" A physical parent is able to raise effectively only a small number of children. The average family has about 4 children, and these 4 children demand the full attention of the parents to meet their needs. When the family becomes larger, perhaps reaching a size of 8 or 10 children, the older children are given some responsibility to care for the younger children in the family, though under the supervision of the parents.

When a spiritual parent (that is the soul winner who leads a person to Christ) begins to be responsible for more than a small number of new Christians, he is unable to give the needed attention and care to each. The pastor is usually the spiritual parent of most of the new Christians in the local church, and when the number of new Christians becomes larger than one person can effectively handle, one of two things happens: (1) the new Christians are neglected, and little or no spiritual growth takes place, or (2) the new Christians are given the needed attention and care by the more mature Christians in the congregation, and the church as a whole works together in the follow-up effort.

When a church begins to see its members evangelizing and laymen winning persons to Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour, this problem is multiplied, for then there are several spiritual parents in the church who multiply even more the spiritual infants who need the spiritual parental care.

Thus it is evident that, if proper parental care is to be given to the new Christians, there must be some way in which the local church can coordinate its follow-up efforts and provide adequate nurture for its spiritual children.

*Minister of Evangelism, Orangewood Church of the Nazarene, Phoenix, Ariz.

When one attempts to develop the adequate objectives for follow-up efforts, he must keep in mind two important aspects. First, he must develop objectives that will meet the needs of the new Christians being won to Christ. Second, he must develop objectives that will provide the spiritual parents that will provide the care necessary for spiritual development in the new Christians.

Thus two comprehensive objectives can be clearly developed which will ultimately meet the needs of follow-up evangelism. The first objective may be stated as: to provide the love, nourishment, protection, and training necessary for the spiritual infant to grow into a spiritually mature Christian, faithfully serving Christ and the church under the leadership of the Holy Spirit.

The second objective may be stated as: to enable the spiritually mature (that is, older brothers and sisters in the family) to do the work of follow-up with the new Christians, providing the necessary parental care.

In order to accomplish these objectives effectively, a certain amount of organization must be structured in the local church. Principles must be stated and taught to the laymen who will provide the parental care. This should involve an approach to follow-up evangelism which would not only be comprehensive enough to meet the needs of the new Christian, but also would be simple enough for the average layman in the church to be able to execute, with the help of a follow-up coordinator or some other responsible person to act as an overseer.

Some of the principles involved, and the problems encountered in such a program, along with materials and methods which have proven effective, will be shared in future articles.

Practical Points

that make a difference

He Talks too Much!

Dear Son:

I love our pastor, but I wish that his college professor had told him of the danger of overexposure.

He talks before the service, during the service, and after the sermon. There is no time that he doesn't feel compelled to say something.

Now what he says is good—and in small doses it is excellent. But I just see too much of him!

He exhorts during a youth musical, preaches a sermonette after a choir program, and feels that a church evening is not complete without his speaking.

Son, laymen listen to their pastor a lot during any one week. I'm not a psychologist, but a farmer, and I like a variety of fare. Don't you have the "sneaking suspicion" that his speaking would be much more effective if we heard less of it?

Well, I may be wrong. I have been in the past. But it seems to me that a pastor ought to make his exposure worthwhile and let some of his laymen take responsibility. It will help us and him too.

What I am trying to say, Son, is make your moments of exposure count in the great moments of the congregation's life. We will love it!

Love,
Dad

A Tuesday Morning Prayer

In the Pastor's Study

This is Your church, Lord, and I am Your servant.

As we—You and I—begin this week,
help me to work efficiently and effectively, not wasting time in trivials, but investing myself in the central tasks.

And yet, as I seek to concentrate on the major responsibilities, help me to be sensitive to “the little things”— like phone calls, and people stopping by, and writing notes of love and appreciation.

Although You have given me projects to complete by virtue of being
Your servant, direct my mind again and again to the fact that these “projects” are only ways to reach people where they are with Your good news.

By Your help, Lord, I will gear all my work and time to ministering to others—whether that is being with them face-to-face or being with them as I study and pray and ponder and plan.

When it is with them face-to-face, help the time to be a real spiritual encounter, producing spiritual growth in all of us, and not just a visit—unless just a visit is what You want.

As I study, Lord, may it be diligently, drinking deeply of Your Spirit and Your Word, so that I am Your man in life and thought and pulpit.

Give me anew each day that selfless perspective and motivation that comes only from You.

Thank you for calling me to a lifework for which I am inadequate, in order that my adequacy can be from You.

So as we—You and I, Lord—begin this week, which really has been in the making for weeks and months,
May it and I
be filled with Your plans, saturated with Your Spirit,
endued with Your power, characterized by Your love.

Thank You, Lord.
I am Yours;
This church is Yours.

Lead, Lord.

A Good Old Word

General Superintendent Coulter

SOME WORDS fall into disrepute with the passing of time. One of these is the word loyalty.

John Ruskin once wrote, "Loyalty is the noblest word in the catalogue of social virtues." Because of the excessive demands for "personal rights" in our modern society, some have felt that to be loyal somehow curtails a person's freedom. Some feel that loyalty cancels out the freedom of the individual to think for himself. However, loyalty is a part of the very "tapestry of liberty."

No society can long exist without the basic ingredient of loyalty. It has been said that "loyalty is the cement that holds men and groups together." Without it the whole framework of life crumbles.

Loyalty is a very practical thing. It is more than an emotion. It imposes rigid, ethical requirements on us. It involves careful discrimination, clear thinking, and fair judgments. "It is intelligent devotion to an idea, a cause, a person, or a group."

Perhaps it is time for those of us who are in the ministry to shake the dust off this good old word and revitalize it with all its legitimate meaning and significance. Intelligent devotion to an idea, to a cause, to a purpose on the part of the church's ministers is the only hope for the progress and vitality of God's kingdom.

A fresh infusion of loyalty to the doctrine and life of holiness would bring spiritual direction and blessing to the entire church.

An unashamed loyalty to the ethical demands of Christian conduct would save the church from compromise and indirection.

An aggressive loyalty to the commitments of the church to her worldwide program of evangelism would provide the financial support and the response of God-called youth to carry the gospel to the ends of the earth.

The church doesn't ask for "blind" loyalty, but for intelligent, honest, and responsible commitment of life and service to the cause of Christ.

With loyalty the battle can be won. Without it the cause is lost.

Daniel Webster

But God also wants our talent; namely, any natural ability, endowment, power, or potential divinely given. Paul put it squarely to the Corinthians in his first letter: "Who makes you, my friend, so important? What do you possess that was not given you? If then you really received it all as a gift, why take the credit to yourself?" (4:7, NEB).*

GIVING and LIVING

That individual was right who said, "The Christian life simply cannot be built upon the sacrifices of other people!" And again, "When a man comes into money, either God gets a partner or man loses his soul." But Jesus' supreme illustration of "plus giving" came from a poor widow who gave her all (Mark 12:41-44). Who would join His honor roll in the twentieth century?

PASTOR—why not suggest these items to the Sunday school classes as appropriate, inexpensive remembrances for their teachers?

As men in the ministry we have a responsibility to the world, but may God help us to remember the responsibility to our own children.

Lest We Forget Our Own

IN THE SIGNING of our covenant to become Salvation Army officers, we pledge ourselves to spare no effort in the leading of the lost to Christ. In our constant contact with other people, ours is the responsibility of informing them of the claims of the gospel.

While preparing for summer camp activities, a tremendous feeling of responsibility came over me for the many children that would come to camp. I concentrated on trying to become acquainted with all the campers, with the hope that many of them would make a decision for Christ by the time they left camp.

In my concern for decisions to be made during the close of our Music Institute, I took great pains to prepare a "fagot service" around the campfire. At the conclusion opportunity was given for a time of decision—and there were many.

After it was all over, I stood there in the empty campfire ring—the lights were turned off and the fire still burning. While there in the silence, with just the burning wood crackling, I felt two small arms slip around my leg. As I looked down, there was my daughter. With tears in her eyes she looked up at me and said, "Daddy, I didn't get a chance to throw my twig in the fire."

With tears coming down her cheeks, she clutched harder and said, "I don't pray to God, and I should."

I picked my daughter up in my arms. I hope in some way she will understand that I asked her at that point for forgiveness.

You see, I had stood there in the midst of people with the thought of doing something for someone else's child. In looking over that group of young people I failed to recognize that my child was in that group. Somehow I had lost my own daughter in that crowd. I can't remember seeing her face while giving the message and the invitation. I can't recollect thinking that possibly she could be one who needed to make a decision.

There is danger of concentrating so much on other children that we forget our own. It is difficult to admit the fact that we can be so busy with other children that we do our own an injustice.

I attempt to express myself because

by

Training, Dean of Married Students,

possibly there are others in the ministry who face the same problem. I am deeply convinced that, unless our own children understand the gospel and our motive for service in the ministry, we will cause them great spiritual damage.

Lest we forget our own! Lest we forget that our children need what we give to others! Lest we forget to share with them as we share with a stranger's child! As men of the ministry, we have a responsibility to the world; but, O God, help us not to forget the responsibility to our own children!

What we are is what they will be. I have seen many ministers' children who were bitter and unhappy. Part of this is due to lack of spiritual depth; part is the fact that they are individuals; part is the fact that they make their own choices. But also part of it is their understanding of compassion as they see it in their parents.

We have a responsibility to the lost of the world—and that includes our own children!

His Lordship, the Pastor

By Earl Wachenschwanz***

A FELLOW COMMUNITY PASTOR said in my presence recently, "Don't expect me to bow to my people. I am the minister and they must respect me as such." My reply was an unanswered question, "What does the word minister mean?"

It is true that the Bible has something to say regarding a congregation's respect for its pastor (Heb. 13:17). It also has a message for the shepherd. "Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock" (1 Pet. 5:2-3).

While churchmen may debate the margin of distinction between the clergy and the laity, the real pastor identifies himself with his people. History has no more obnoxious tyrants than the clergymen who lord it over God's heritage. So the question we face at the moment is: Are we lordling it or are we ensamples to the flock?

The true pastor will identify with his people in the act of public worship. He does not see the pulpit chair as a throne. When the music director, as an exercise of worship, asks the congregation to stand, why shouldn't the pastor stand also? Does he not need to join in worship? Is it merely patronage for the pastor to join in reading the responsive selection that deals with repentance and forgiveness? Daniel, the holiest man of his day, never stood taller than when he identified with his people in his intercessory prayer: "And I prayed unto the Lord my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord . . . We have sinned. . . . We do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousnesses, but for thy great mercies" (Dan. 9:4-5, 18). This identification prompts the pastor to employ more of "we" and less of "you" in his sermonic admonitions.

As chairman of the board, the pastor occupies a distinct chair, but it is not a throne. He recognizes that there are men on his board who are more conversant than he in matters of economics, business, and other matters of administration. He will not initiate his "superior" program on the strength of a slim and fragile margin of a sometimes coerced majority. He realizes that at times unanimity is impossible, but when it appears within reach he believes it to be worth waiting for. Thrones are immobile, but the pastor's desk chair is equipped with a swivel that enables him to turn to his board member and say, "I believe you have a point and we should consider it."

An important segment of the pastor's professional equipage is his training and experience in counseling, but he will not lord it over the conversation in interviews. He gladly sets aside his prerogatives of proclamation and listens politely and sympathetically to his counselee. By so humbling himself he often discovers that he is the beneficiary rather than the benefactor of the visit.

As an ensample to the flock, the pastor cannot afford to be too dependent upon the aura of detachment—a sort of mystery maintained by aloofness. Ezekiel, the chaplain of the disconsolate refugees in Babylon, sat where they sat. He had no occasion to employ the aura of aloofness, because he also was a refugee. By the same token, the shepherd is also a sheep. This fact should be sufficient to nullify his supposed credentials of lordship, and reduce his ambition to the level of minister and servant.

Are we demeaning the ministry? No, we are exalting it. The spiritual law that states that "he that humbleth himself shall be exalted" has a prime application to the pastor. Are we concerned with our image? He whose image we seek "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life . . ." (Matt. 20:28). What about the prestige of our profession? To the community we are vocationally classed as a professional. But in reality ours is more than a vocation—it is a calling.

Our calling makes us more amenable to God than to standards of prestige. And think how prestigious it will be to hear our Master say: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me. . . . Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matt. 25:34-40).

The Parsonage

An interview with Mrs. Ross Hayslip, Tucson, Ariz.

Lora Lee Parrott. I am very much interested in talking with you because of your wide experience in the parsonage. Just how many pastorates have you had through the years, and how many parsonages have you lived in?

Mrs. Hayslip. Five pastorates—in Wooster, Ohio; Circleville, Ohio; Carthage, Mo.; Whittier, Calif.; and Tucson, Ariz.

L. L. P. Can you remember how many different parsonages you have lived in during these years?

Mrs. Hayslip. Eight!

L. L. P. Apparently yours is one of the most beautifully appointed parsonages in the country. Is this the culmination of many years' experience or have you always had a beautiful home like you now enjoy?

Mrs. Hayslip. I guess the most depressing parsonage I ever did have was a huge old house with dark woodwork and creaky floors. In fact, I cried all night after our arrival. And the thing that made it worse was the fact that I had moved out of a beautiful new home into that one, complete with old black pipes and terrible old-fashioned plumbing—a hot-water tank on the kitchen floor, fully exposed.

L. L. P. How were you able to make the adjustment to the parsonage which had proved to be such a disappointment?

Mrs. Hayslip. To begin with, we started adding color. My husband helped me and we were able to paper some of the rooms, and then something wonderful happened. I have noticed this reoccurring through the years. When the church realized I was interested in the parsonage and wanted to make it a happy place for our family and official residence for the church, they suddenly became interested also. They redid that old kitchen of their own volition, taking out the ugly plumbing and the hot-water heater. They went on through the house to make it a good, pleasant place for our family to live.

L. L. P. I think it would be good if you could describe for us the southwestern Arizona-type house you now live in.

Mrs. Hayslip. We were here five years when the church decided to replace an older home by building a new parsonage. And all of us decided at the beginning that it was going to reflect the area in which we live—southwest America, Indian, Arizona, desert, etc.

L. L. P. What about the colors?

Mrs. Hayslip. I wanted the house—when I walked through the door—to look like sunny Arizona.

L. L. P. How did you accomplish this?

Mrs. Hayslip. My main color was to be yellow.

L. L. P. You don't mean yellow on the floor?

Mrs. Hayslip. Yes, I do—and it's beautiful!

L. L. P. What about the rest of the colors?

Mrs. Hayslip. The colors we decided on include orange and white with a small accent of purple.

L. L. P. Does this mean you have modern furniture?

Mrs. Hayslip. All the way! It really is called contemporary—Parsons' tables, cubes for end tables, white divans (Whittier church gave us the huge, smoked-glass coffee table). With the contemporary furniture and bright colors there are also antique pieces of decoration both on the walls and on the white bamboo and glass shelving.

L. L. P. With all of this beautiful home, how does it become your ministry? I know that you do not play the piano, direct the choir, or do a lot of other things some wives do, and that your home—in a special way to you—has become your ministry. Could you explain this?

Mrs. Hayslip. This means having people from the church in your home and making them feel welcome. It is the very opposite of trying to impress them with either what you have or the way you serve.

L. L. P. What kinds of groups do you enjoy having in your home?

Mrs. Hayslip. We invite new families, young people, and older people—more so than people of our own age. It definitely is not to meet our own social needs, but to have our home as an extension of our outreach and purpose in the ministry of the church.

I used to feel inadequate and inferior because I could not play the piano or sing like lots of pastors' wives, but I feel God has given me the parsonage as a real ministry that I understand how to work with. My home is where I feel at ease.

I do not like to have regular groups on a monthly basis, but like to have people come by my own invitation when I feel we are ready for them and can help make a contribution to their lives.

L. L. P. Do you have any word to young wives getting started in the ministry on how they may develop the parsonage as a home for themselves, or a haven for their family, or a place of witness and usefulness for their church?

Mrs. Hayslip. I think a neat, uncluttered house will welcome people.

L. L. P. Is this why you go for contemporary furniture?

Mrs. Hayslip. Probably so, because it has straight lines and has an uncluttered look. Another thing that helped me was the fact that we lived, when we were first married, beside an Italian lady who had two children. She told me that every night before she went to bed she picked up things in her home, so that she woke up the next morning to a clean house.

L. L. P. How do you entertain your district superintendent?

You Can Hope Again

Col. 1:9-14

FLOYD PATTERSON was interviewed after his losing the heavyweight title to Sonny Liston, and among other things, this is what he said: "Now, if I were a wise man, I would retire. But I'm not a wise man. . . . All my life I've been waiting, waiting, waiting. Waiting for the next fight. Waiting for the decision. Waiting for the next fight again. And now my children are growing up and life is passing me by and I'm still waiting" (Duncan E. Littlefair, The Glory Within You, Westminster Press, 1973, p. 25).

Patterson is typical of a lot of people—waiting. Waiting for something to happen. Waiting for some bit of magic to pick up the pieces of their lives and put them together. Waiting for hope. That's where a lot of people are.

The good news of the gospel is that man can hope again—now—and he doesn't have to wait.

Paul shares this promise of hope with the church at Colosse.

I. WE CAN HOPE AGAIN—BECAUSE OF REDEMPTION. "For he has rescued us out of the darkness and gloom of Satan's kingdom and brought us into the kingdom of his dear Son, who bought our freedom with his blood"

(Col. 1:13-14, TLB).<sup>1</sup>

There are two things about this redemption that we should know:

1. It is costly. Rom. 5:6-8 is a reminder of this. But to realize that its cost is for us is to pass beyond the stage of argument that His redemption is our hope.

2. It is complete. Paul emphasizes that Christ ". . . bought our freedom with his blood and forgave us all our sins" (TLB).

It is one thing for man to be aware of the redemptive possibilities; but when he experiences the redemptive process, and its forgiveness, then he knows the full extent of hope.

Man never breaks through to hope until his guilt has been taken care of, and forgiveness erases the guilt. Redemption is complete in that it goes beyond what anything or anyone else can do.

Redemption means to buy back, to create atonement—at-one-ment with God. The redemption that is possible through Christ allows a man to hope again, to live again, and to live with the promise of eternal life.

II. WE CAN HOPE AGAIN—BECAUSE OF A RELATIONSHIP. Paul relates how we are “always thankful to the Father who has made us fit to share all the wonderful things that belong to those who live in the kingdom of light” (Col. 1:12, TLB).

1. The Living Bible, copyright © 1971, Tyndale House Publishers, Wheaton, Ill. Used by permission.

One of the “wonderful things” of redemption is the relationship we have with the Father.

Malcomb Boyd, in his book, The Lover, relates, through the book, the growing relationship evolving between himself and the Father.

The developing relationship with the Father is one of life’s great touchstones of hope.

There is also the relationship with the family of God. The New International Version says, “. . . the Father . . . has qualified you to share in the inheritance of the saints in the kingdom of light” (Col. 1:12).<sup>2</sup>

In the family of God there is a love that nurtures our hope, a concern, a faith—all the ingredients that hope needs to stay healthy.

III. WE CAN HOPE AGAIN—BECAUSE OF RESOURCES. Paul says: “He has rescued us from the dominion of darkness and brought us into the kingdom of the Son” (Col. 1:13, NIV).<sup>2</sup>

When we are ushered out of darkness into the kingdom of light, it makes available to life all kinds of resources for living—victorious, hopeful living.

The kingdom of the Son makes available to us the Father’s love, His care, His presence, His Spirit—all the resources life needs to get it all together in a spiritual way, and to have a truly valid hope.

And while all three of these reasons to hope really come from redemption, they are different ways of looking at our inheritance in Christ.

You can hope again! Indeed, it is good news!

The Parsonage

Mrs. Hayslip. I used to feel a little under bondage with Dr. Aycock because I was a lot younger then; but I cannot honestly say I was ever under bondage in keeping leaders of our church in our home.

L. L. P. Do you keep evangelists?

Mrs. Hayslip. It depends on who it is; and of course at various stages in our lives, circumstances have been different. However, now we have a room at the opposite end of the house with its own bath, and I do enjoy keeping evangelists. But we do not cook for them—they take all of their meals out.

L. L. P. I think some young pastors’ wives are fearful lest they appear they want too much in desiring to have the parsonage upgraded or brought up to standard. How do you feel about this?

Mrs. Hayslip. I do not feel there is any house which cannot be made to look presentable with a small amount of money when colors are used and some good old-fashioned hard work.

L. L. P. I also know that, when your children started to college, you felt you had to go to work. How do you react to a pastor’s wife working?

Mrs. Hayslip. I feel it helps the pastor’s wife to work if she wants to work. I have been blessed with real good health and have been able to work all day and still go every night to revival meetings and other church activities. Some women cannot do this; but I think for myself I am a much better pastor’s wife because I have the opportunity to get out of the house and meet people on a different level and from a different perspective. And of course it relieves the financial burden to a point where we are able to do more things for our ministry and our people than we could otherwise do.

L. L. P. You do not feel, then, that a pastor's wife must stay home in the parsonage all day in order to be a blessing?

Mrs. Hayslip. Of course not. And with every other woman in the church working, what would the pastor's wife do anyhow? She probably has better mental health and even physical health by the diversion of activity, since energy often generates energy.

Meditating with the Master in Matthew

November 3

A DATE WITH DESTINY (25:10)

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 25:1-13

INTRODUCTION: Wedding feasts are an important part of the culture of the Middle East. The festivities often go on for a week. In Jesus' day wedding celebrations sometimes lasted for three weeks.

There is one wedding feast that we cannot afford to miss. It is called "the marriage supper of the Lamb" (Rev. 19:9). How can we be sure that we will be there, and not be left outside? Our text (v. 10) tells us: "They that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut."

The Second Coming will be at a time of separation. This fact is illustrated in the parable of the 10 virgins. We find this separation in three stages.

I. SEPARATION IN PREPARATION (vv. 1-4)

Jesus told about 10 virgins, or bridesmaids, who took their lamps and went out to meet the bridegroom. These lamps were made of clay and would fit easily into the palm of the hand.

Five of these virgins were "wise." The Greek word phronimoi means "sensible" or "prudent." The other five were "foolish." This is the adjective moron, which we have taken over into English. It means "dull, stupid."

The five wise bridesmaids took along a container filled with oil. (In the Bible "oil" regularly means olive oil.) They prepared for any unexpected emergency, as sensible, prudent people always do. But the foolish just assumed that no emergency would arise.

II. SEPARATION IN CONFRONTATION (vv. 5-9)

The bridegroom and his friends were delayed in coming. So finally the bridesmaids "slumbered and slept." The Greek

By Ralph Earle

Professor of New Testament
Nazarene Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Mo

says that they "began to nod" (enystaxan) "and went on sleeping" (epathendon).

Suddenly at midnight the cry rang out: "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." The watchman had spotted the lights of the bridegroom's party approaching the town.

All 10 of the bridesmaids got up quickly and "trimmed their lamps"—that is, snipped off the charred ends of the wicks. But the five foolish ones discovered that their oil was almost gone. Frantically they begged the wise companions: "Give us of your oil." The King James Version then says: "Our lamps are gone out." But the Greek clearly reads, "Our lamps are going out" (sbennyntai, "being quenched"). Their oil was so low that their lamps were flickering.

The reply of the five wise virgins may on the surface seem selfish and cruel. But the symbolism is clear: No one can derive his spiritual life from anyone else. Every person must have his own spiritual experience.

III. SEPARATION IN DESTINATION (vv. 10-12)

While the five foolish virgins went to look in vain for oil—all the markets were closed at that time of night—the bridegroom came. "They that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut."

Finally, frustrated, the five foolish ones came to the bride's house. Standing outside in the street, they called earnestly, "Lord, Lord, open to us." But he answered, "Verily, I say unto you, I know you not." They were left outside in the dark—a type of the "outer darkness" in which lost souls will live forever. Inside was joy and light and feasting. But they had missed it.

CONCLUSION: How may we be sure of being ready for the second coming of Christ, our Heavenly Bridegroom? First, we must have an up-to-date spiritual experience. It is not enough to avoid backsliding into sin. We must be sure that our lamps are not "going out," burning dimly.

In the second place we must be filled with the Spirit. In both the Old and New Testaments oil is a type of the Holy Spirit. The ones who were ready and went in to the wedding feast had their containers filled with oil.

In the third place we must live godly lives day by day. A good motto for all of us is:

Do nothing you would not like to be doing when Jesus comes.

Say nothing you would not like to be saying when Jesus comes.

Go to no place where you would not like to be found when Jesus comes.

USE WHAT YOU HAVE (25:29)

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 25:14-30

INTRODUCTION: The parable of the 10 virgins emphasizes the need of inward experience as a preparation for the Second Coming. The parable of the talents stresses the other side of the coin—the need for outward service as a preparation. We must not only be holy in heart, to be ready, but we must also be busy about our Master's business.

I. THOUGH WE HAVE DIFFERING ABILITIES, WE ARE RESPONSIBLE TO USE WHAT WE HAVE (vv. 14-15).

Jesus told about a man who was going to a distant country. He called his servants and gave each of them some money to invest while he was gone. To his most capable servant he entrusted five talents. To another he gave two talents and to a third just one talent. (The talent was worth about a thousand dollars.) Then he left on his journey.

II. REWARD IS BASED ON CHARACTER AND SERVICE (vv. 16-23).

The man who had received five talents invested them and doubled the amount. The next servant did the same with the two talents he had received. But the man who had been entrusted with one talent buried it in the ground.

Finally the master returned and settled accounts with them. The first servant reported what he had done and was rewarded with the words of v. 21. The same thing took place with the second servant. Both received exactly the same reward (vv. 21, 23) because both had doubled what was given them to invest. ("Thou" in v. 21 is not in the Greek, as indicated by italics.)

These men were not rewarded for cleverness or spectacular achievement. The "well done" came because they were "good" in character and "faithful" in service. That is all that God requires of us. And all of us can receive that same reward.

III. FAILURE TO USE WHAT WE HAVE RESULTS IN LOSS OF EVERYTHING (vv. 24-30).

Those who do nothing usually put on others the blame for their failure. The one-talent man came with his whining complaint and his stupid alibi (vv. 24-25). "Gathering where thou hast not strawed" perhaps means "gathering from a place where you have not threshed." (The last verb, diaskorpizo, is used for winnowing grain.) The servant was accusing his master of filling his barns from other men's threshing floors.

Castigating the slave as wicked and "slothful"—that is, "lazy"—the owner ordered that the talent be taken from him and given to the one who had 10 talents. Because he failed to make use of his talent, he lost it. To be lazy is to be "wicked."

The 13-volume Oxford English Dictionary indicates that our present use of the word talent for a natural or acquired ability stems from this parable. So we may apply its lesson to the use or disuse of the talents God has given us.

CONCLUSION: There are two main lessons we can learn from this parable. The first is that if we do not use our talents we lose them. This truth applies to scores of areas in our lives. The second is that too often in our churches one-talented people do nothing, while the many-talented do all the work. This should be a solemn warning, for that path of inactivity can lead down to "outer darkness" (v. 30).

THE FINAL SEPARATION (25:46)

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 25:31-46

INTRODUCTION: Matthew 25 contains three parables on preparedness for the Second

Coming. (Some object to calling today's scripture a parable, but the use of "sheep" and "goats" suggests a parabolic form.) The parable of the 10 virgins underscores the importance of having an up-to-date spiritual experience. The parable of the talents calls attention to the demand for faithful service. The story of the sheep and the goats deals with the realm of social relationships. All are essential.

I. SIN IS NOT ONLY DOING WHAT IS WRONG, BUT ALSO FAILING TO DO WHAT IS RIGHT.

"The Son of man" is Jesus' favorite designation of himself (over 80 times in the Gospels). He declared that when He comes in glory, with all the holy angels, He will sit on the throne of His glory. All nations will be gathered before Him and He will separate the people as a shepherd separates the sheep from the goats. The sheep (good people) will be on His right, and the goats (bad people) on His left.

The people on His right will be welcomed into His eternal presence. Why? Because they ministered to Him when He was in need.

Surprised, they will ask, "When?" The answer: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." To fail to do our duty in helping those in need is to bring on ourselves the condemnation of Christ.

II. THE JUDGMENT DAY WILL BE A TIME OF FINAL SEPARATION.

There are many sad separations that take place in this life. But often there are new comforts and compensations. But in that day it will be final. There will be no appeal from the supreme court of heaven. Its decision will be irrevocable. When God makes the division, there is no recall or reconsideration. For His verdict is based on His perfect knowledge of all the factors involved. He never gives a wrong decision.

III. THERE ARE ONLY TWO ALTERNATIVES IN THE NEXT LIFE: ETERNAL PUNISHMENT AND ETERNAL LIFE.

This is spelled out very precisely in our text: "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." There are no halfway houses. The Bible nowhere teaches that there is a purgatory. Rather, it declares that our sins must be purged in the cleansing fire of our personal Pentecost.

Are we ready for Christ's coming? This chapter shows us how we may be ready.

Some people major on deep piety and even devoted service. But they neglect their social responsibilities. Others glory in being social activists, but they ignore inner, individual salvation. It is not a case of either/or, but of both/and.

AN APOSTLE TURNED TRAITOR (27:5)

SCRIPTURE: Matt. 26:14-25, 47-50; 27:3-5

INTRODUCTION: Any wasted life, any lost soul is a tragedy. But the tragedy is compounded when the person was once a trusted follower of Christ and a leader in His kingdom. Such was Judas Iscariot.

I. THE TREACHERY OF JUDAS (26:14-16)

Judas was "one of the twelve"—one of Jesus' chosen apostles. He had traveled with the Master for some three years. He had even been sent out by Christ on a preaching mission (10:1-15). Yet now he conspired to betray Him. And all for "thirty pieces of silver"—about $25.00!

II. THE TESTING OF JUDAS (26:21-25)

As Jesus and His disciples were eating the Last Supper, He suddenly surprised them by declaring: "Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me." Shocked and sorrowful, the disciples began one by one to ask, "Lord, is it I?" The Greek says, "Surely not I, Lord?" Jesus indicated that it was the one who dipped his hand into the same bowl with Him, as they ate together. Startled, Judas asked, "Surely not I, Rabbi?" (NIV).<sup>1</sup> It is noticeable that Judas did not address Jesus as "Lord," as the other disciples did. The Master's reply was, "Thou hast said," which probably means, "Yes, it is you" (NIV).

It seems evident that Jesus was giving Judas a last opportunity to repent and renounce his evil plans. But the traitor was adamant and sealed his doom in the Upper Room (cf. John 13:30).

III. THE TRICKERY OF JUDAS (26:47-50)

The traitor led a large contingent to the Garden of Gethsemane. There he quickly stepped up to Jesus, said, "Greetings, Rabbi!" (NIV) and kissed Him. The perfidy of this is almost beyond belief. Here was a close friend and the trusted treasurer of Jesus and His apostles. Yet he now betrays the Master with an affectionate kiss.

In reply to this atrocious trickery Jesus said, "Friend, wherefore art thou come?" or "Friend, do what you have come for" (NASB).<sup>2</sup>

IV. THE TRAGEDY OF JUDAS (27:3-5)

When Judas saw that Jesus was condemned to die, he "repented himself." This is not the strong and usual verb in the New Testament for "repent" (metanaeo, "change one's mind") but metamelomai, "regret." He felt sorry that he had done this awful deed, but he did not experience a moral and spiritual repentance.

So he went back to the religious leaders of the nation and said, "I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood." Their callous attitude is shown by their reply: "What is that to us? see thou to that"—"That's your responsibility" (NIV).

Throwing the money into the Temple, Judas went out and hanged himself. Thus ended the tragic life of a man who had the greatest conceivable privilege and opportunity, but who threw it all away for political ambition and a few paltry pieces of silver.

CONCLUSION: How cheaply do we sell Jesus? For fleeting pleasure, or the privilege of having our own way? How much does it take to make us betray His trust in us?

God's Eulogy of the Saints

SCRIPTURE: Eph. 1:3-14

THESIS: God's blessings to the saints may be profitably and scripturally considered "eulogies."

INTRODUCTION: The imprisoned Apostle Paul writes a beautiful and spontaneous hymn of praise at the beginning of his Ephesian letter, the drabness of his cell having extracted nothing from his jubilation. Reading this passage in the original language, one can almost see tears streaming down Paul's face as his praises gush forth.

The expressions "Blessed," "hath blessed," and "blessing" in v. 3 come from the Greek word eulogeō, the basis for our English word eulogize. Paul is saying, "May the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ be eulogized, who hath eulogized us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." Note His eulogies:

- I. GOD PICKED US OUT ONE BY ONE FOR HOLY LIVING (Greek) (v. 4).
  - A. Gave this act precedence over creation of the world (v. 4).
  - B. Anticipated delight in making scrutinizing examinations of our holiness (v. 4b). This meaning is resident in the compound word katenōpion.
- II. HE ADOPTED US INTO HIS FAMILY AS ADULT SONS (Greek) (v. 5).
  - A. Gave us access to His immense wealth (v. 7).
  - B. Reveals to us the intimate secrets of His kingdom (v. 9).
  - C. Extends to us the most exalted of privileges (v. 12).
- III. HE PAID THE EXORBITANT PRICE REQUIRED FOR OUR RANSOM (v. 7).
  - A. Ignored the suffering of His own Son.

B. Ignored the loss of heaven's greatest Treasure.

- IV. HE MADE US HIS INHERITANCE (vv. 13-14).
  - A. Ignored an exhaustless supply of material wealth (v. 4).
  - B. Gave us the Holy Spirit in a reciprocal transaction (v. 14).

CONCLUSION: These are only the beginnings of God's "eulogies." Let us mingle our tears and our voices with those of Paul and say, "Let the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ be [eternally] eulogized!"

Lessons from Jonah

SCRIPTURE: Jonah 1

TEXT: "Arise, go to Nineveh . . . But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish" (vv. 2-3).

I. God has a specific place where He wants us, and a specific task for us.

A. He wanted Jonah in Nineveh for a preaching engagement.

B. For each person today He has both a position and a mission.

II. Even though God's command and purpose are clear, we still have wills of our own.

A. After Jonah received his instructions, he thought the matter over and decided to disobey.

B. God desperately wants to use us, but that use is contingent upon our wills.

III. To disobey divine directives is to invite misery, heartache, and even disaster.

A. When God says, "Nineveh," and we turn to Tarshish, we're headed for trouble.

B. Relate incidents in chapter 1.

C. A popular TV program some years ago was entitled "Father Knows Best"; when will we learn that God knows best?

IV. Because of His limitless love, God follows us even when we flee Him.

A. Jonah was fleeing (v. 3); God was preparing (v. 17).

B. Was God cruel in His dealings with Jonah in chapter 2? No. He was pursuing His man.

C. God has a marvelous way of bringing circumstances and events to bear upon us so that we will be reminded again of Him, and perhaps be made willing to obey (2:9).

V. What we may want doesn't alter what God wants.

A. When God spoke the second time, His instructions hadn't changed in the least (3:1-2).

B. Whenever we transact business with God, we do it on His terms.

The Prevailing Prayer of Christ

TEXT: "And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou are converted, strengthen thy brethren" (Luke 22:31-32).

INTRODUCTION: The Speaker in these verses is Jesus; the scene is in the Upper Room; the occasion is the Last Supper. The purpose is to forewarn, prepare, and strengthen the disciples. There is a tone of urgency in Christ's voice—"Simon, Simon, behold [listen, take heed]."

I. THE ANCIENT THREAT: "Satan hath desired to have you . . ."

A. Not only Peter, but all the disciples.

B. "Satan has asked excessively that (all of) you be given up to him—out of the power and keeping of God" (Amp.).<sup>1</sup>

C. This is also true today.

II. THE DEVIL'S PURPOSE: "that he may sift you as wheat"

A. To sift means to separate:

1. The disciples one from another
2. Each and all from Christ

1. The Amplified New Testament, copyright 1958 by the Lockman Foundation, La Habra, Calif.

B. What disaster if these men had been scattered and lost!

C. If Satan had his way, every sinner would be deterred from grace, and every child of God would be brought to ruin.

D. He desires the Father to surrender us to him. Alone, we could never stand and resist him. But wait—

III. THE PRECIOUS PROCLAMATION: "But I have prayed for thee"

A. Glorious and wondrous thought! How it thrills, blesses, strengthens, and comforts!

B. Addressed to Peter especially, but surely all of the disciples were included in Jesus' prayers ("pleaded in prayer," TLB).<sup>2</sup>

C. Doubtless in the darkest hours, the apostles recalled that Jesus had prayed for them, mentioned by name, in His dialogues with the Father.

D. We all know people in whose prayers we place great confidence. But to have Jesus himself pray for us! What power there must be in His prayers!

The News of Forgiveness

SCRIPTURE: Luke 7:36-50

INTRODUCTION: A newsman is taught to ask, "Why, when, who, where, and what?" Let us apply this technique to the "Good News."

I. WHY do we need forgiveness? (vv. 48-50)

A. We need to be saved from our sins.

B. We need release from our guilt.

II. WHEN do we need forgiveness?

A. When we have sinned outwardly, as the woman (v. 37).

2. The Living Bible, copyright © 1971, Tyndale House Publishers, Wheaton, Ill. Used by permission.

B. When we have sinned inwardly, as Simon.

III. WHO pays for forgiveness? (vv. 41-42)

A. The person who is wronged.

B. An example is Hosea (Hosea 3:2-3).

IV. WHERE do we find forgiveness? (v. 48a)

A. Jesus paid for our forgiveness (Isa. 53:6).

B. Jesus offers us forgiveness (1 John 1:9).

V. WHAT is my response to forgiveness? (vv. 44-47)

A. Our gratitude should be great.

B. Our lives should be different.

I Voted to Close the Church

Last Sunday I voted to close the church—not intentionally, nor maliciously, but carelessly, lazily, indifferently. I VOTED.

Yes, I VOTED to close the open Bible that has been given us by many years of struggling and by the blood of martyrs who died that we might have it to read.

I VOTED for our minister to stop preaching the great truths of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

I VOTED that the children no longer be taught the wonderful stories of the Bible in Sunday school.

I VOTED for the darkness of superstition and the degrading influence of sin, the blight of ignorance, and the curse of selfish greed once again to settle on the earth.

I VOTED for the voice of the congregation to be stilled and no longer be heard in joyous song.

For you see I COULD HAVE GONE, and I SHOULD HAVE GONE—but I didn't!

I Helped My Church to Live

I helped my church to live—I was there. I was one more vote for Christ.

When I became a member of the church, I promised to be there.

I did not become a member to stay away.

I WAS THERE!

I helped my church to live—I paid my way.

I did not let others pay my way—any more than I would permit them to pay my utility bills, buy my clothes, feed my children, or pay my taxes.

I PAID MY WAY!

I helped my church to live—

I prayed for my church.

I want every blessing and grace for her, As naturally and normally as I do for my dearest ones.

I PRAYED FOR MY CHURCH!

I helped my church to live—

I worked for my church.

When called upon to do a task that I was qualified to do, I did it.

I WORKED FOR MY CHURCH!

ARE YOU IN THIS LIST?

Horace Bushnell made an interesting list of all who might be excused from giving to missions:

1. Those who believe that it is "every man for himself" in this world.
2. Those who believe that Jesus Christ made a mistake when He said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."
3. Those who believe the gospel is not the power of God and cannot save the heathen.
4. Those who regret that missionaries ever came to our ancestors with the good news of salvation.
5. Those who do not want to share in the final victory.
6. Those who believe they are not accountable to God for the money entrusted to them.
7. Those who are prepared to accept the final sentence: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these . . . ye did it not to me."

Talks on the Miracles of the Bible

By Robert G. Lee (Baker Book House, 1927; reprint, 1974. 102 pp., paper, $1.95.)

This book is one that people will enjoy reading and pass around as "proof at last" that the miracles of the Bible are scientifically possible and utterly believable.

The chapters cover 29 miracles, beginning with the "myth" of the Garden of Eden and including Daniel in the lions' den, the loaves and fishes, and the sundial turned backwards for Hezekiah.

The author is a past president of the Southern Baptist Convention who is apparently a well-read person. He has drawn from literature and science to show that miracle accounts are as easily believed as many other historical and/or mysterious facts.

This book should strengthen a pastor's own faith in the "unexplainable" and give him facts and illustrations from which he could build "miracle" sermons. In addition, it should be a popular book in a church library.

Wise Up and Live

By Paul E. Larsen (Regal, 1974. 239 pp., paperback, $1.25.)

Reverting from a bias against the book when first begun, I have come full circle in being so taken up with it that I read almost every word. The introduction is by Dr. David Allan Hubbard (president of Fuller Seminary and speaker on "The Joyful Sound"), who also was one of Larsen's parishioners at one time.

Larsen avoids the extremes on social issues, standards, theologies, current events. Yet in so doing, he zeroes in on some vital matters in an almost prophetic manner. It was gripping to this reviewer.

The by-line is "Wisdom from Proverbs." It is a Bible commentary for laymen. Very contemporary, yet holding out for Bible beliefs and standards in a very refreshing manner, without compromise. Example: "Unemployment with a clean conscience is better than the memories that haunt you as long as you live even though you are never caught."

In discussing wisdom, he includes such subjects as chastity, filial piety, cleverness, knowing God, liquor, the city, talk, death, laziness, criticism, hate. This is an ideal book for ministers.

COMING
next month

● Christmas and the Christian

The Christian need not permit himself to be squeezed into anybody's mold in the celebration of Christmas.

● The Sunday Evening Service

Knowing how it began may suggest some ideas as to how it can be kept vital and effective in the program of holiness evangelism.

● The Minister as a Sufferer

All Christians suffer at times in behalf of others, but the minister is called upon to do so on a "full-time" basis.

● The Minister and the Language

The preacher of truth is the messenger of God, and a messenger transmits truth through language.

AMONG OURSELVES

Start counting your blessings, and before going very far down the list you count prayer. What a privilege to carry (as the songwriter put it) everything to God in prayer! And had you noticed that, among those who have made the dynamics of prayer their special interest of study, there is absolute agreement on one fact: There is no better teacher and no greater example than Jesus. His prayer life is our model, His approach to prayer our norm. The question, then, is important: Is His prayer life merely a luxury or is it a necessity? Think about it as you hear Dr. Willingham out (p. 3). A better understanding of prayer and its implications will affect every other area of our lives and our ministry. The need to erect a new building arises, and prayer changes everything (p. 5). In danger of losing the cutting edge in our preaching? Prayer brings us back to the basics (p. 10). As necessary as is the deep and abiding concern for lost souls (p. 12), it can happen in our hearts only as we follow the example of Jesus in prayer. He tried repeatedly to get the lesson across to His slow "learners." "This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting," He told them, after their ministerial power had been ineffective in casting out devils. So start counting. Think about the most precious privilege we tend to take for granted and neglect to use. At the risk of sounding quite trite, let it be shouted from the housetops in these trying times, "Prayer does change things!" Believe that, and act like it, and how can you help but "think thankfully"?

Yours for souls,
